Dr. Wong Ming Har, Ruth

Dr Ruth Ming Har Wong is an Assistant Professor in English Language Education at The Education University of Hong Kong with approximately 20 years of experience in teacher education, curriculum development, and academic leadership. She has served in various leadership roles, including Associate Head, Associate Programme Leader, and Faculty Professional Development Programmes Coordinator, contributing extensively to programme development, quality assurance, teacher preparation, practicum supervision, and academic administration.

Dr Wong's research focuses on language-learning motivation, teacher motivation and identity, AI-enhanced language learning, intercultural communication, grammar and writing pedagogy, and positive education. She has published widely in international peer-reviewed journals, including Language and Education, Interactive Learning Environments, Innovation in Language Learning and Teaching, and Teacher Education Quarterly, and has led or collaborated on numerous externally and internally funded research and teaching-development projects.

Beyond her university roles, Dr Wong has contributed extensively to the education sector through service to Hong Kong's Education Bureau, curriculum advisory committees, external examining, programme accreditation, and research grant review panels. She is an active keynote speaker, conference organiser, journal reviewer, and educational consultant, regularly engaging with local and international professional communities.

Information provided by School Manager